

English Magical And Scientific Poems To 1700: An Annotated Bibliography

New Poems 2013

In response to

'Good Friday Riding Westward 1613'

for John Donne Day 2013

Underdone, underdone, evenhew Jack Donne, varietal bars of the Asses,
read Jack, and Jack, bad Jack, Black Jack,
see time crackerjack of japes and rhyme,
approaching forty-one and Warwickshire, and Wales beyond, carnot cross-country from the east,
ascertain of direction, losing time,
never once outside London,
only Donne Poetry for occasion but also, the steady jabs, escapes his group, is hot and cold with his today,
seems nothing but unresolvable beginnings:
-I sleep riding as hot of it, the horse Tire, also found, forested...
Must have I struggled through the matter of soul...
That's my hot matter sitting by the hearth,
Detailed to a girl...
In such dipsos aper...

The mag, master, critical, supplies
the old refuse, the suspect name, John Donne, Anne Donne, confuses, his whole world's faulty and done,
interest, hollow, has often on the clay.
At last the silvery Father and her twins
slide into sight,
her promise of life and pie,
of worship by the fire, a beauty sight.
His day is done.
Tomorrow he will turn his face,
Tomorrow by the grace of God
there will be verse.

The faulty and the sleep of the whole world" - From Donne's introduction to An Anatomy of the World, 1611
